Possible Medicaid Administrative Actions

- Secretary Tom Price on record as critical of Medicaid
- Seema Verma major proponent of state flexibility
- Authority to make changes administratively
 - Regulations – rewrite or pull back
 - Enforcement/funding of implementation
 - Waivers

GOP Governors Plow Ahead on Medicaid Cuts

- States begin to prepare for waiver request
 - Arkansas, Maine and Wisconsin
- States should start making changes their own systems

“The long-term solution is get rid of the national definition of health care, put that back down to the states.”

Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP)

- Covers about 6 million children nationally
- Funding expires Oct. 1, 2017
- Support for extension
- Key questions – What's included? What's the timing?

Children with Medical Complexity

- 3 million children with medical complexity in the U.S.
 - Approximately 2 million of these kids are on Medicaid
- 6% of children on Medicaid and 40% of the costs
- Often cross state lines for care
- Have no national data tracking on care or costs
- Require tailored, intensive organized system of care

Advancing Care for Exceptional Kids Act (S. 428)

- Reintroduced in Senate on February 16
(17 cosponsors to date)
 - House planning to reintroduce
- Addresses challenges facing children with medical complexity identified by families and physicians
- Create a national framework for data, quality and outcomes
- Accelerate learnings on how to improve care/reduce costs
- Voluntary for states, families and providers
- Only proposal enabling national improvement necessary to impact millions of children with medical complexity

It seems fitting that, with the #TrumpCare debate raging, I got this bill in the mail today from Ethan's most recent open heart surgery.

When it comes to health care in America, there is at least one principle on which we, as a people, should agree: health care access for our nation's children is sacred and should not fall victim to politics. Yet, this year, we've seen Congress engage in closed-door efforts to repeal the Affordable Care Act (ACA) and enact replacement legislation that makes no effort to protect coverage and access to care for kids across America.

We represent the hospitals in Michigan that serve many of our state's sickest kids. To us, the recent hasty actions in Washington, D.C., to reform health care are a direct threat to the well-being and survival of our most vulnerable children.

Instead of pushing ahead with flawed legislation, we urge Congress to do the right thing when it comes to our children: take proposed cuts to health care coverage and access for children off the table.

The U.S. Senate's new health reform legislation, the Better Care Reconciliation Act (BCRA), does ~~not~~ offer better care for kids.

Unfortunately the U.S. Senate's health reform legislation, the Better Care Reconciliation Act (BCRA), is a major step backward for children and their health care. Coverage and benefits for more than 30 million children who rely on Medicaid would be threatened.

Children, who represent more than 40 percent of all enrollees yet account for just 20 percent of Medicaid costs, could see their health care significantly reduced.

Tell your U.S. senators to protect children's health care and oppose the BCRA!

Children will be negatively affected by the Better Care Reconciliation Act (BCRA). At its core, the bill is a major step backward for «StateName»'s children and their health. If enacted, the BCRA would end Medicaid as an entitlement to coverage and treatment for more than 30 million children who would be subject to per capita caps and potential limits on their health care.

While the bill does attempt to mitigate some of the cuts included in the House-passed American
